

TRAINING MISSION

Continuing education for ophthalmologists in Cap-Haïtien and Limonade

In October 2010, a dozen of IRIS Mundial volunteers trained a group of ophthalmologists in the region of Cap-Haïtien, primarily to improve surgical techniques for cataract surgery.

Meanwhile, other volunteers worked in Limonade, an extremely poor village near Cap-Haïtien. Hundreds of patients were screened for visual problems and received medical consultations. Those in need were offered reading glasses or medication, and some were lucky enough to receive cataract surgery.

IRIS Mundial volunteers who went to Cap-Haïtien and Limonade.